The deconstruction of the photographic act.

Frozen time.

The search for balance.

The disturbance of the medium, pushing it to its limits.

The straight connection with the element you are shooting at.

It is a return to basics.

Grips and holds us in our memories.